Chinatown, or Yaowarat as it is known locally, is a sprawling neon-lit enclave of tiny lanes, fabulous food, dramatic Chinese shrines and wiry old men sitting on plastic stools staring through thick-rimmed glasses. It's a fantastic place just to wander around during the day, stuffing your face with weird fried things and try to figure out just what is being displayed in the Chinese pharmacy windows. Yaowarat Road itself, Chinatown's main stretch, comes alive at night when fold-up-table restaurants spill out over the pavements, and a million and one gold shops, with their ridiculously ostentatious facades, flick on their neon switches. It's quite a sight. Here you will find one of the most imposing temples in Bangkok, Wat Traimit Withhayaram and the world's largest solid gold Buddha. Weighing over five tons and standing over three meters high, it's worth has been estimated at over US$10 million. And, 50m further on, the Odeon Circle Gate, an enormous structure that serves as the entrance to Chinatown proper.

Continue on and mumble "Pak Khlong Talad" to explore the 24-hour flower market. From dusk till dawn, Pak Khlong Talad fills city streets with the floral perfume of a thousand blooms. By the river vendors prepare fresh bouquets of lilies, orchids, and roses, and everything that could possibly blossom. Prepare your nose, this is a place that will take your sense of smell away! .

Talad Noi (Talat Noi), one of the oldest neighborhoods in Bangkok, is filled with historic temples, charming shop houses, elegant colonial mansions and narrow, winding laneways bursting with street art and second-hand car parts. A street photographer's delight located just a few minutes' walk from Bangkok's bustling hotspot of Chinatown (Yaowarat). The less frequented neighborhood of Talad Noi is a quiet, riverside Chinese community where each alleyway yields its own unique surprise. If you love exploring off-the-beaten path, add this lesser-known neighborhood to your Bangkok travel plans. Here is everything you need to know about this Bangkok walk in the historic, forgotten neighborhood of Talad Noi, Bangkok. Enroute stop at unique café on the riverbank of Chao Phraya River for refreshment drink.

This is a truly wonderful experience for anyone wishing to see the many sites of Bangkok's fascinating Chao Phraya River. It gives you a taste of a bygone era when much of the city life revolved around the river & its network of canals. You can but only relax as you drift along the river, passing smiling faces, ancient temples and activities all around you. Today, take the express boat and ride through the colorful "Canal Tours". Enjoy the scenery and breezes along the Chao Phraya River. Explore the canal network around Thonburi (the west side of the Chao Phraya River), whizzing nimbly down green and peaceful canals – past traditional houses on stilts and colorful flowers decorate their verandas, wooden shacks, temples and many more. See Bangkok as it was as you sail along the canals. Stop at Wat Arun, also known as the Temple of Dawn, one of the city's most important and beguiling religious sites. It is best visited at dusk when the setting sun forms a stunning backdrop.

Bang Kra Jao is small green area in close proximity to Bangkok. It's unique style of waterways and small roads – only wide enough for bikes and motorbikes make this a great place to ride. With the Bangkok skyline in the background gives the only indication you are still in this teeming metropolis. As we pass temples, local markets and Thai houses we can see up close the communities that live and work here – you will be amazed and did not think possible that Bangkok could be like this. This is a very gentle 22-km ride along country back roads and suitable for anyone that can ride a bike. We ride as a group with experienced Spice Roads cycle guides setting a gentle pace and stop often to visit points of interest and allow everyone to catch up. Our guides are knowledgeable on the local area and customs and explain the history, culture and local way-of-life each time we stop. Water is included as well as a TREK mountain bike and helmet

Ancient City (formerly Muang Boran) is dubbed as the world's largest outdoor museum. Situated close to the Crocodile Farm in Samut Prakan province, the 320-hectare city features 116 structures of Thailand's famous monuments and architectural attractions. The grounds of Ancient City correspond roughly to the shape of the kingdom, with each of the monuments lying at their correct places geographically. Some of the buildings are life-size replicas of existing or former sites, while others are scaled down. The replicas were constructed with the assistance of experts from the National Museum to ensure historical accuracy. Outstanding works include the former Grand Palace of Ayutthaya (destroyed in the Burmese invasion of 1767), Phimai Sanctuary in Nakhon Ratchasima, and Wat Khao Phra Viharn on the Cambodian border. Ancient City is located on the old Sukhumvit Highway, about 33 km east of central Bangkok and is open every day from 8:00am to 5:00pm

Witness an amazing railway market where you will see the vendors frantically packing away their stalls as the train approaches, and then once your train has gone through, the vendors setting up their stalls once again on the tracks. Then continue to Damnoen Saduak. Here, the canals are filled with small flat boats loaded with fruit, vegetables and other goodies for sale. Expertly paddled by mature ladies, the boats jockey for position when prospective buyers arrive on the boardwalks, ready to stop and bargain at a moment's notice. A boat ride along the canal, which is both exhilarating and fascinating, takes you to the market. The traditional long-tail boat allows an interesting glimpse into local life, orchards, traditional teak houses, floating water hyacinths, snapshots of local people by the river and more. This colorful market environment is guaranteed to be great fun. And don't forget to buy something!

This easy day trip gives a superb introduction to the architectural heritage of the ancient capital Ayutthaya. Ayutthaya is filled with palaces, temples and religious monuments of great historical and cultural significance – even in their ruined state. Ayutthaya was one of the richest cities in SE Asia during its heyday, but after it was attacked by the Burmese in 1767, most of the city was destroyed. and the ruins left to be over-taken by nature. However, over the past 30 years the remnants of the city have been renovated into a UNESCO historical park, which, at 85kms from Bangkok, makes an ideal daytrip from the city.

The tour begins with a guided stroll around the splendid Bang Pa-In Summer Palace and its landscaped gardens, peppered with curious buildings that blends turn-of-the-century European architectural styles with Thai and Chinese styles. Continue to Ayutthaya Historical Park and explore the temple ruins. Visit other temples

Kanchanaburi is a land forever cloaked in history. Renowned across the globe for its famous WWII landmarks – Bridge over the River Kwai (Kwae) and the Death Railway – this westernmost province was used by the Japanese army as a strategic supplies route into neighboring Burma and beyond. The River Kwai tour is ideal for those interested in a combination of history and adventure. The itinerary is well thought-out with an easy start at the War Cemetery and War Museum, followed by an exhilarating boat ride on the historic rivers - ideal for those who love an adrenalin rush! Kanchanaburi has to offer as the province boasts a beautiful natural landscape of dense tropical jungles, crisscrossing rivers and streams, and spell-binding waterfalls. The idyllic Kwai Noi River cuts through lush valleys flanked by sheer cliffs on both sides, making for a great river journey by a bamboo raft or long-tail speedboat. The Death Railway is, today, one of the most scenic rail routes in the country.
